Orland Wins Championship

Swamps Worth With Barrage of 25 Hits

Sunday, Sept. 22nd the Orland Park baseball team won the championship of the Southwest Suburban League by defeating Worth 11-7. This was the 2nd game of the 3-game series. Orland won the 1st game 4-3.

In winning the championship Orland will receive 1st prize of $100 from the league and 50 per cent of the receipts. This was the first championship for Orland since 1939. The boys plan on buying jackets as soon as possible.

Orland scored seven times in the first four innings, only to have the score tied up at the end of the 4th. Orland immediately scored four more in the 5th, 3 in the 6th, 2 each in the 7th and 8th and blew the cover off in the 9th on 6 singles, a double and 2 triples as 12 men went to bat.

Les Rump was the winning pitcher, allowing 7 runs on 8 hits. He held Worth to four hits and no runs in the last four innings. Hanus started for Worth and was relieved by Leland in the 3rd. Leland "hung" around until the 9th when again Hanus tried his luck. This was even more disastrous for Worth. He was greeted with a triple and five consecutive singles before retiring the side. In the entire game Orland blasted out 25 hits.

The team wishes to thank George Granat for inviting the boys up to his place of business after the game for a little celebration "on the house."

Weekly Broadcast From Tinley Park

Tinley Park, the village of progress! This has long been a by-word among its citizens, and all the citizens work together for the good of their town. This is clearly shown by the Memorial Park and the activities going on there all summer. But there never has been a broadcast from that village, and that is what is going to happen now.

Through the progressive ideas of Mr. Charles Hollwedel, proprietor of Saenger Hall, arrangements have been made with Radio Station WJOL, in Joliet to broadcast one half hour each week starting Sunday evening October 13 from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, direct from the stage in the Saenger dance hall.

Bob Phillips and his 10 Men of Music will furnish the music for these dances and broadcasts, and it is well worth attending and listening to, according to the splendid reputation of this orchestra.

Gets Letter From Holland Expressing Thanks For Clothing

The following article appeared in the Marseilles, Ill. paper recently and concerns a former resident of Frankfort, Mrs. John Clark, who, since the death of her husband in 1942, has been making her home in Marseilles to be near her sons.

Mrs. John M. Clark of 478 Roath St. today submitted for publication a letter which acknowledges receipt of a coat she gave in a local clothing drive for Europe's war-stricken. The writer is Miss Miepman Nelsen of Ryksstaatsweg 115, Haarlem, Holland.

Mrs. Clark, the mother of Dr. Paul R. Clark, a local physician, Dr. Ted R. Clark, dentist and Dr. Floyd Clark of Danville, Ill., said those who contributed to the clothes drive would feel gratified to know that such contributions do reach destinations and that gratitude is profound.

The letter follows: "Today I came into possession of a beautiful overcoat in which I found your address. I can find no words to express my thankfulness. Suffice it to say: 'God bless you and yours for your liberality.'"

"May I introduce myself to you? My name is Miss Miepman Nelsen and my age is 33. My late father who has been dead for 13 months now, was a general in the merchant official and an alderman of the town of Naumdam, a place of 40,000 inhabitants, about 10 kilometers from the capitol of my country. I now live with my mother and one of my five brothers in the town of Haarlem. Said brother is a teacher of English, and his lessons enable me to write you a letter in your own language. At this moment he is not home so that he cannot supervise my writing, but I hope, I'm not murdering the King's English too badly.

I suppose you know all about what my poor country suffered from the beastly Huns. But thanks to the liberal help of your country we are now rapidly recovering. It is true, we are still faced with considerable shortage of foodstuffs and clothing, but we are no longer purposely starved. On the contrary, we are at present being pushed forward along the road to recovery by all the philanthropic people in the world among whom the American people undoubtedly rank first.

"As for your fine coat, I was in very urgent need of it," as I had not been able to buy anything in the line of clothing for more than six years. And you will no doubt understand in what a deplorable state my wardrobe is after such a period.

"So I have told you a little about myself and my family. May I request you kindly to let me know something about yourself and your family. We should all love it so to know a little more about our benefactors and their country.

Dear Mrs. Clark, thanking you once again most cordially for your generosity and hoping soon to hear from you.

GOOD NEIGHBORS HAVE THE ANSWER

A very exemplary spirit of neighborliness and cooperation is being shown by a group of neighbors in Mokena.

There are nine homes on Front St. in Mokena West of Wolf Rd., all on the north side of the street. These neighbors are all very congenial to one another and enjoy visiting together. The idea came to them, "Why not hold a party?" Then the question came, "Where?" for nine families would make quite a crowd, and most homes are not equipped to house that many at one time. Then someone said: "Why not have a street dance?" and that is just what they did.

The first of such an affair was held Labor Day night on the street in front of their homes, and the next one was held Sept. 14. By all reports a wonderful time was had by all. Music was furnished for the dancing by a portable phonograph and all joined in the fun.

While resting between dances, they gathered on the porches and front lawns of their homes and a "sing fest" was enjoyed, singing old as well as modern songs, to the music furnished by neighbors: Paul Shrank on his concertina; Don Helenhouse, George Dath and Al, Hamilton with their guitars. They had so much fun together that they thought other blocks of neighbors in town would like to do something of this sort to create a more friendly spirit and at the same time create some activity in the village.

The neighbors participating in this street dance and song-fest are: Ed Schenkel, Hans Schenkel, Griffins Shranks, Helenhouse, Schultz, Hurley, Dath, Lauffer, Marvin Hutsons of Joliet and Walter Spiess and Al Hamilton families of New Lenox.

These neighbors are planning a gala Hallowe'en party to be held in October.

Maybe some other group will have another idea through which a neighborhood party can be held. We are hoping so. Let us know so we can tell it to the world.

ACTS ON COMPLAINTS NEW LENOX SCHOOL BOARD

After hearing numerous protests from the patrons of the school district in regard to crowded conditions of the New Lenox school, the Board of Education of School District 122, New Lenox, has initiated action which will give the voters the opportunity to improve the condition. At a meeting of the Board last Thursday night the president, Darwin F. Cooper, appointed Herbert C. Senning, J. E. Robinson and Charles O. Ellis as a committee to consider and recommend suitable sites for the building of a second school. Preliminary arrangements have also been made to float the necessary bond issue.

Last week a representative of the State department of public instruction visited the school. It was his opinion that because of the inadequate playground facilities and the very limited possibilities of securing any additional grounds in the vicinity of the present school it would be wise to consider building another unit rather than to add more rooms to the present building.

The school population is growing so rapidly that drastic steps are necessary before another school year starts. When the building was remodeled in 1940 it was planned to accommodate 210 pupils. There are now 270 in the school, and even though no new pupils should move into New Lenox, there should be close to 300 in school next year. The fifty first-graders this year are only the first of a series of beginning groups of that size or larger.

Work To Be Started Next Week On Black Top Road

Mokena is going to have a direct connection with route 45 to the east, thru a good black-top road. This has often been talked about and for the past two years, the Will County Highway Department has been working on securing the right-of-way, which has affected about fourteen property owners.

The road, which will be two miles in length, will begin at the old school house corner on Front street in Mokena and will go north to the Lawrence Kohl corner, but where it now makes a sharp turn east, there will be a sweeping curve, according to modern way of building roads. In order to make this curve, 1 1/2 acres were required from the farm property of Mr. Wm. Weber.

This road which is known as Mokena Road, State Aid No. 2, will be 20 feet in width of black-top with 6 feet of shoulders on each side. In the complete right of way, 70 feet was bought. Property was bought from the Elmer Benson farm at the old school house corner which will necessitate the moving of their home further east.

According to the County Highway officials, work will be started on this road next week, the cost of which will come from the County's share of the motor fuel tax.

A new bridge has been built at the Louis Lauffer corner on this road which is now completed. It is not expected to put the black-top on until next year, but the grading and all other necessary work will be done during the fall and winter months.

COOLS TOWARD PRESS

WASHINGTON.—Newsmen probably won't write about it, but President Truman's Bermuda trip climaxed a significant change in his relations with the press. The old days of intimate, chummy talks now have vanished! Truman was cool, aloof, even chilly.

And for good reason. Some of his supposedly most trusted news friends let him down. Off-the-record talks which the President thought were going only to half a dozen people leaked out and became the property of millions.

Most disillusioning of these was a reunion of the "Hard Rock Club," a group of a dozen newsmen who covered Truman's vice presidential campaign when he was ignored by the rest of the country.

Several weeks ago the President invited the boys to an evening on the yacht Williamsburg. They played poker, drank bourbon and generally let their hair down—especially the President. He was indiscreet enough to tell all about the Russian situation and what he thought of Chester Bowles—then OPA administrator.

His remarks were not complimentary. Truman minced no words about either Bowles or the Russians and it was hard to say which he liked least. Although he favored OPA, he thought the fight to win its approval from congress would not have been so hard if Bowles had not issued so much propaganda and talked so much.

Shortly afterward, Time magazine published a brief account of this very confidential evening. Blame for the leak fell upon Edward Lockett, Time staffer who is a member of the Hard Rock club. Truman was so indignant that for a long time he would not speak to Lockett. Other club members virtually ostracized him.

Later, the Chicago Sun's Tom Reynolds, no member of the club, wrote another account of the President's off-the-record remarks on that memorable evening. Naturally, Truman's views got back to the Russians. This made him even more vexed—and worried.

So from now on the chief executive has decided not to be the naive and trusting gentleman he once was with his supposed close friends of the press. During the Bermuda trip, for instance, he gave press secretary Charlie Ross instructions that newsmen were to ask no questions which did not pertain directly to the trip. And when one man violated this rule to ask why Rhode Island's Sen. Theodore Green was not invited aboard the Williamsburg, the President nearly snapped his head off.

LEARN OF SPEECH

Final decision for the Jimmy Byrnes speech on Germany was imparted to high officials in Washington about 12 days before he made it. The suspicion is that the Russians learned about it at the same time.

Byrnes phoned President Truman about 12 days in advance, told him the Russians were on the rampage, that nothing could be done to satisfy them. He therefore proposed that the United States and Great Britain try to set up a German government which could be won over to democracy and which could serve as a bulwark against Russia.

President Truman, who has come to put complete trust in Byrnes' judgment, agreed.

Whether or not the Russians tapped the trans-Atlantic phone, or whether they had other ways of knowing what was going on is anyone's guess. Maybe it was just coincidence.

Anyway, it was shortly after this that Foreign Minister Molotov made his sudden, mystery flight to Moscow. Simultaneously, inspired stories began to leak out of Poland that Russia would take Silesia away from Poland and give it to Germany. Obviously this was German bait to counteract the offer Byrnes was going to make to Germany.

If Russia goes ahead with this policy of "The Soviet giveth and the Soviet taketh away," it will cause the toughest showdown so far experienced between Moscow and Washington.

The categorical Byrnes-Truman position is that the Soviet can neither "giveth nor taketh" without the consent of its allies, that Germany's boundaries are to be decided only at the final peace treaty—which Russia so far has refused to call.

Effect of Blue Discharges

As the G.I. Bill of Rights states that a veteran who has received a discharge other than dishonorable is entitled to benefits, Veterans' administration is required to pass on each individual blue discharge case to determine if the veteran is entitled under the law.

When application is made by a veteran with a discharge without honor, it is investigated thoroughly. The service department in which the veteran was enlisted is contacted to determine the reason for a discharge without honor.

These include those who were discharged for desertion without trial, fraudulent enlistment (in which case it is considered that enlistment never existed), and probable undesirable, which type of discharge usually is given for cases involving moral turpitude. In such cases a man usually is given the privilege of accepting a discharge without honor in lieu of trial by court martial.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son was killed in service and my husband and myself are unable to do any hard work and we have three children under 18. Is there anything I can do to claim a pension for the death of my son? I am receiving his insurance but with that we cannot come out, for we have to see the doctor every 14 days.—Mrs. E. L. Z., Caldwell, Tex.

A. You certainly are entitled, from what you tell me, to a service connected dependent's parents pension for the death of your son and should draw at least $25 each for yourself and your husband if he is the boy's father. Suggest you write or go see either of the Veterans' administration offices at Federal Office building at Houston or at 106 East 6th street, Austin, and give them all details. They will determine your eligibility for a pension.

Q. Is it possible for me to visit my son's grave at government expense? If so, how soon?—R. S., Denver, Colo.

A. There is no law at present which provides for any appropriation which may be used for expenses of civilians for travel to graves of veterans buried overseas.

Q. My former husband served in the army three years. During that time I received an allotment for my two children. We were divorced a year before he joined the army. The divorce papers state he has to pay alimony for the children and myself. The government sent us $40 we were getting as alimony and now I'm told all that the government paid was the allotment. Can you answer this?—Mrs. G. L. D.

A. This is a legal case and you should consult an attorney. You might write to the office of Dependency Benefits, 215 Washington street, Newark 2, N. J., giving them full details.

Q. My husband served with Boalsburg troops in Texas and Mexico at the time of the trouble down there. His discharge was destroyed by fire quite a few years ago. On August 24, 1945, he passed away and I am a widow and have been unable to work since October, 1945. My husband was an invalid for five years before he died. I would like to know if I am in any way entitled to a pension or a small income. We have a medal he received for Mexican border service in 1916 and he also served with the Pennsylvania National Guard.—Mrs. M. L. R., Lewistown, Pa.

A. I do not like to arouse your hopes then have them killed, but it is possible that you may be entitled to a pension. Write to the Office of the Adjutant General, War Department, Washington 25, D. C., and ask for a certified copy of your husband's discharge and as much of his service record as they will send you. You might also contact the National Guard headquarters in Pennsylvania for any additional data concerning his service. Would suggest that you enlist the aid of the Red Cross or of the American Legion post in your town. When you have all possible information apply to your nearest office of the Veterans' administration and they will determine your eligibility for a pension.

Q. I have been advised that since I was a member of the regular army and completed two full enlistments (six years) I should be entitled to three years re-enlistment bonus. I enlisted October 2, 1939, and was discharged November 17, 1945. I would appreciate information about this.—P. W. W., Denver, Colo.

A. The army says that if all the period you served was honorable service and only if you had re-enlisted prior to February 15, 1946, you would be entitled to re-enlistment bonus.

TREASURE OF THE SEA

BY George E. Walsh

W.N.U. Release

THE STORY THUS FAR:

Dick Jordan, survivor of a steamer bound from South America to the United States, comes upon a drifting schooner. Only others aboard are the drunken captain, and his daughter, Rose. A crew of pirates under Tucu attack the vessel, but after a fruitless search for treasure they leave because a storm is brewing. Captain Bedford recovers and they sail the schooner to an island. There Dick discovers that Tucu and his crew are on the other side battling a group of white men. Dick secures some automatics at the ship and returns. The white men rout the black pirates. Dick saves Pettigrew from Tucu, but endangers himself.

CHAPTER XI

Dick tripped on a stone. With an exultant animal cry, the half-breed took advantage of the accident. Dick made a fruitless effort to wriggle away from him; but the uplifted knife followed until it was poised directly over his throat.

The near report of a gun did not seem to be connected with his danger, and its echo in his ears made no appreciable impression on his mind. Even when the giant half-breed shivered, and began toppling over, he could not associate the act with the pistol crash. But the knife did not descend. It dropped from the nerveless hand of the Carib and fell with a thud to the beach.

Tucu, like a giant forest tree whose base had been shattered by lightning, swayed a moment uncertainly and then without a moan or sigh fell with a crash, sprawling on top of his adversary and pinning him to the ground.

"Dick! Dick, are you hurt?" Out of the strange apathy that had numbed his mind, Dick heard the voice, and came to his senses as Rose rushed to his side. She grasped his shoulders and pulled him from under the inert body of the dead half-breed.

"Are you hurt?" she repeated anxiously.

He smiled and shook his head, his eyes on her as if unable to comprehend.

"I was afraid I'd be too late," she murmured, tears close to the surface, "or miss him."

"You shot him?" he asked in a dazed voice.

"Yes!"—shuddering and turning away from Tucu—"I—I had to, or he'd killed you."

In the excitement of the conflict and the relief that followed their deliverance from Tucu, neither Dick nor Rose noticed Hen Pettigrew, who had watched the proceedings at close range, and who now sat staring at them in evident surprise and bewilderment. Although weak and dazed by his own wounds, the man was fully conscious of all that had been going on, and when Dick finally glanced up and caught his eye he started with a grunt.

"Jordan!" he said thickly. Dick's face flushed an instant and then paled. Rose glanced from one to the other, and asked: "Who is he? Is he a friend?"

Dick gulped and nodded, but made no articulate sound with his lips. Despite the pain of his wounds, Hen Pettigrew grinned.

"Sure! We were both on the City of Bahia before she went to the bottom. So your boat wasn't swamped, Jordan? You were lucky. Ours toppled over, and all went to the bottom except those who swam to this island."

How Dick's Ruse

Made Complications

Dick sat up and faced the situation bravely. In saving Hen's life, he had unwittingly made his own exposure a certainty. There was no need for further subterfuge; Rose would have to know all.

"I was lucky," he replied, "but not the rest. They were all lost. I clung to a raft for days and nights until Tucu here picked me up on the lugger, and then—"

He glanced at Rose, and added: "Ask her. She'll tell you the rest."

But Rose's sympathy for Pettigrew was unexpectedly aroused to action. Hen's strength, that had been restored for a time by the excitement, showed signs of waning; he grew deadly pale, and began sinking rapidly. His eyes closed and the head sagged forward until it touched the ground.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, jumping to her feet. "He's dying! We must get help, Dick."

The rest of the party arrived in time to give Hen all the human aid that was possible. He was seriously but not dangerously wounded, and after staunching the flow of blood and binding up the ugly holes the bullets had made in his side and shoulders, he recovered from his faint, and smiled grimly.

"I'll pull through—need rest—that's all."

The story of how the handful of sailors had battled through the surf and reached the island on the night of the shipwreck, and how for days and nights they had existed on shell fish and a few birds they managed to kill, while they watched and waited hopefully for a sail, was told dramatically by the different survivors.

When the lugger appeared they had hailed it joyfully, but later they had reasons to dread Captain Tucu and his crew more than their lonely isolation on the island. The old pirate when he found the shipwrecked sailors, an unarmament attempted to rob them of what few possessions they had carried away from the steamer, and when they objected the inevitable conflict had been precipitated.

"He had a crazy idea we knew something about smuggled jewels that he said were aboard the steamer," Hen Pettigrew explained later. "Don't know where he got the idea. Must have dreamt it."

"No," replied Dick, smiling. "I told him."

Hen and the others looked at him inquiringly.

Dick chuckled ruefully at the thought of how his ruse had complicated the situation so that others, perfectly innocent of any attempt at deception, had been drawn into the net. His invention had nearly cost the lives of a dozen men including that of his old enemy, and for a moment he grew grave and serious; then, recalling the various sequences of events that had ended so satisfactorily, he laughed again.

"I guess, after all, that was the best story I ever invented," he added. "Anyway, it seems to have worked."

Briefly as he could he outlined this part of his adventure. The others listened and nodded their heads with grinning approval. When he was through Hen glanced keenly at him.

"I could almost believe you were a smuggler, Jordan, if I didn't know you weren't."

Dick flushed. "Perhaps I am," he retorted challengingly. "How do you know I'm not? You know my record."

"Yes," slowly, "I know your record."

The sudden gravity of their faces, and the challenging light in their eyes, disturbed Rose, who glanced from one to the other. She began suddenly to distrust the man they had saved.

"Dick's record," she said slowly, thrusting an arm into one of his, "is clean. Whatever it might have been in the past, it's been wiped out now."

There was a silent pause, an awkward period in which the two men exchanged glances that none of the others could interpret; but there was evident hostility between them based upon something in the past. Rose pulled Dick gently away.

"Come. There's so much to do. We must help the wounded, even if they are Caribs and our enemies."

Captain Bedford had already assumed charge of the situation, and the seamen willingly took orders from him. The dead Caribs were buried on the beach, and the wounded cared for. Then with the small boats they made a visit to the lugger, which had been rolling lazily at anchor in the cove.

Captain Bedford overhauled the craft, and finally sniffed his scorn. "She ain't worth sailin' into port. She's a stinkin' bulk that ought to have gone to the bottom long ago. We'll leave her."

"But, Cap'n," protested one of the seamen, "she's good enough to carry us home. We ain't figgerin' on staying here longer'n we have to. We're a bit homesick."

"Sure!" was the grinning retort. "But the Betty's worth a dozen sick luggers. I figger we can patch her up in less'n a week an' sail home. We'll have a full crew now. Wait'll ye see her."

A visit to the Betty on the opposite side of the island put new heart in the castaways, and under Captain Bedford's direction they began to work cleaning up the decks and restoring the schooner to her old-time condition. The lugger was used to tow her around the island where, anchored in the quiet cove, repairs could be made without fear of another storm wrecking her.

Pettigrew Tells Rose

All About Dick

As the busy days passed, Hen Pettigrew recovered from his wounds, and once more became the masterful man that had distinguished him as an officer of the law.

Two days before they were ready to depart, the Betty having received a new set of sails that were sufficient to carry her home, Hen Pettigrew emerged from his cabin, and seeing Dick forward beckoned to him. "Jordan," he said, "I want to talk with you."

Dick nodded and followed him to the cabin. Something told him that the hour had come when he had to face the crisis. This intuition was strengthened when he found Rose below waiting for them. She smiled gently when he entered the cabin, but made no remark.

Hen Pettigrew closed and locked the door. Then turning to Dick he said: "Jordan, I've told your story to Rose. I thought she was entitled to know it."

Dick started violently, frowned, and then caught his breath to calm his nerves. "I expected you'd do it before this," he replied. "I was waiting for it." He kept his eyes on Hen, refusing to notice Rose's pleading look. "When we parted on the steamer," he added, "you said you'd pinch me if we met on land again. 'Well,' smiling and shrugging his shoulders, 'you've got me. I won't attempt to break away.'"

"You knew I'd arrest you, Jordan," Pettigrew said after a pause.

"Then why'd you save my life? Tucu had me."

"Yes, but I had to get Tucu," Dick replied. "I wanted to settle an old score with him. I guess that was it."

"And leave the score with me open?" smiled Hen. Then frowning, he added: "Jordan, you got me guessing at times. You're a contradiction in character—weak and strong, simple or foolish and shrewd, brave in some things and cowardly—"

Dick's hand clenched. "If you think I'm surrendering because I'm afraid of you, Hen," he began truculently, "get it out of your mind. I—"

"There you go again—off on a tangent," was the quiet interruption. "Now, listen!" he added, raising a hand. "I'll prove to you that I'm right. I'll make an even bet you'll contradict any reasonable man's guess what you'd do under the circumstances. I'll put you to the test."

He paused an instant, his eyes twinkling with amusement. "Jordan, you can have your choice of returning with me to answer that old charge, or going scot free. No, you won't be hounded by the law. I'll report you went down with the City of Bahia. That will close the case. Your name will be eliminated from our books. You'll be a free man to choose your own life."

"You mean—" stammered Dick, his eyes lighting with hope. He stopped and glanced from his old enemy to Rose. Her face and eyes were strangely noncommittal. He would have his freedom, able to look every man fearlessly in the eye, and not dream of nights that the shadow of the law was pursuing and ready to close about him. A great burden slipped from his mind.

"I—" he muttered, beginning again, and stopping abruptly. Rose would not have a part with him in that new life of freedom; he would lose her either way. He turned suddenly to Hen, his mind made up.

"I hate to disappoint you on that bet with yourself, Hen," he said easily, grinning, "but I'll go with you. I said I would, and I haven't changed my mind."

"Consider carefully, Jordan," warned the other. "If you can't prove your innocence of that theft it means five years for you."

"Sure! Don't I know that?"

"You believe you can prove your innocence?"

"No! If I had I'd never have run away."

"You were guilty?"

"Hell! No! I've told you that a thousand times."

"Then why'd you leave? Didn't you know that would brand you as a criminal?"

Dick Throws Away

Chance for Freedom

"Sure! But the cards were stacked against me. Didn't I know that? They'd convicted me on circumstantial evidence, and sent me to prison. I hadn't a leg to stand on, without money or influence. You can't get justice without them—not when some piker's doctored the books and laid his plans so any jury would convict without leaving the room. There was only one other chance left me, and I took it. But I'll go back with you and face the music. That's all."

"That's final?"

Dick nodded and turned his face to the window. He was not aware that either of the others had moved until a hand touched his arm. He swung around, and found himself alone in the cabin with Rose.

"Dick," she said softly, "I know all about it. Mr. Pettigrew told me—told me more than he's told you. There is a chance if you go back. New evidences have been discovered, he says, and he doesn't believe you're guilty. With a good lawyer now, you can establish your innocence, and—"

"Rose," he replied, smiling gently into her upturned face, "there's no money to pay for a good lawyer—or any other kind of lawyer. I have nothing. I didn't decide to go back with Hen because I thought there was a chance of clearing my name. There isn't a chance! I'm going—going—"

"Why?" she asked when he paused.

"Because—because—of you!"

Her face flushed with happiness and shy emotion.

"Then we'll go together," she breathed softly.

"No!" he answered sharply. "I didn't mean that. I won't drag you into it. If I did I'd despise myself. I love you too much for that, Rose, and you know it."

"Yes, I do know it," she replied, pursing her lips in an assumed pout.

"That's why I arranged with Mr. Pettigrew to—hire the best lawyer money could buy. You see that treasure we found on the submarine belongs to all three of us, but you and Father won't touch any of it. Then I'm going to use it any way I please. I might spend it for new dresses and jewelry, and—lots of things—but I won't! I don't want them! But I do want you, Dick, and—flashing him a look that made him tingle—"I'm going to have you if I have to buy you with that treasure."

(THE END)

RED BLAİK'S brilliant Army football team is on the march again. With a record of 18 consecutive victories picked up in 1944 and 1945, Army's first team should carry it through another big year, even if its spotless record so far happens to be dented before December arrives.

At least no one should expect any further wild romping over such teams as Notre Dame, Michigan, Duke, Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Navy.

"Our first line strength is extremely good," Red Blaik tells you, as he looks over his eager talent—talent that includes such backfield stars as Blanchard, Davis, McWilliams and Tucker. "But we are no longer three deep. We are no longer even two deep. In addition to our starting backfield, which will match any in football, we have Fuson at center, Poole and Foldberg at ends and two good guards."

As good as Blanchard and Davis are, they are not as likely to steal the entire show again from such fine backs as young Tucker at quarter and Shorty McWilliams at halfback.

A look at the complete records in McWilliams' case proved the Army was entirely blameless in connection with Coach McKean's charges from Mississippi State. It was McWilliams, backed up by his family, who wanted to come to West Point. McWilliams made application while still in high school, before he ever entered Mississippi State. Letter after letter has proved this.

The trouble started on his home furlough when rather luscious financial inducements, apart from any Mississippi State official connection, were made. And don't believe this was the only large financial inducement offered a college football player this year.

A Smart Choice

McWilliams elected to stay at West Point of his own free will. It was a smart move in his case, as too many leaving service football have come under the gossip of ducking the draft, whether or not the charges are true. I might add that his opponents will find the able entry from Mississippi is one of the best backs in football. He is a great kid with unusual ability. And if there is a better quarterback in college football than young Tucker, or a much better passer, I'd like to have his name.

This year of 1946 may be the last season in some time that Army can field any winning team.

For one reason, too many colleges are paying good football players money that West Point and Annapolis won't and have no desire to meet. For another reason, too many young men have no yearning to get up at 5 a. m. and work 16 hours a day.

It is my belief that college paychecks are going to lead to a national scandal unless there is a sudden check. The fight for young stars, plus inducements offered, already have broken all past records. Athletic scholarships and jobs that can take a young fellow through college, are O. K. But not the substantial paycheck on the side, usually handled by keyed-up alumni.

Back again to this 1946 Army squad—

In my opinion Army will have the best backfield in college football—Blanchard, Davis, McWilliams and Tucker—power, speed, smartness and spirit. Once again, keep a more open eye on McWilliams and Tucker.

Tough Year for Army

"This is the hardest year we've known since 1943," Blaik says.

"Frank Lahey at Notre Dame is three deep with a flock of veterans who range back to his great team of 1943. Many have picked Notre Dame as the best team in football. It may be Pennsylvania will give us all the trouble we can handle. Navy had some hard luck in losing men, but Tom Hamilton will do a fine job with a squad that will give anyone a battle."

"Few men on our squad," Red added, "have ever known defeat. They love football. They are all fine officer material, and that is what West Point is supposed to turn out. We can be beaten and we may be beaten, but unless we are handicapped by injuries to key men, it will take quite a team to turn the trick."

At this point, Athletic Director Colonel Biff Jones was gazing moodily into the autumn sky.

"I was just thinking," he said, "that if we had enough parking space for the human body, we could play to at least 300,000 in the Michigan game, and over 800,000 in the Notre Dame and Navy games. We might do 300,000 in the Pennsylvania game."

"You don't think so? Come along to my office and see the ticket requests already piled up. There were over 110,000 applications for the Michigan game early in June."

Highways, Autos And The R. F. D.

This year rural free delivery and the automobile round out a half century. Their growth, and accomplishment since 1896 has been amazing, and they will deserve the best wishes of the nation on their golden anniversaries. Certainly all those concerned with the best interest of America's highways, and that takes in just about everybody—have reason to felicitate the country mail carrier and the automotive industry. What they have done to improve our roads is a part of the saga of the country's progress.

The impact of rural free delivery on country roads was immediate. When the system was launched in 1896, it was truly "the horse and buggy era" for no record is found of an automobile being employed in RFD service until several years later. In extending the service, condition of the road was of prime consideration.

If the carrier in his buggy could not reach the farm on his route regularly, it was not his fault. Those who missed the service were quick to recognize why they were penalized. The result—farmers who had thought the road past their farms would do, began grading, hauling cinders and gravel, improving the drainage. Farm-to-market road began to emerge slowly from the mud.

On the main highway between cities, the motorcar's influence was first felt. Granted that the car of fifty years ago was not particularly rugged, perils of early motoring were often as much from the highway as from mechanical difficulties. Civic pride stepped in at this point for no public-minded municipality wanted the reputation that it was inaccessible to this new form of transportation. So came to be realized.

To exist and to serve, the automobile and rural free delivery had to have good roads. Out of their necessity has grown our present system of primary and secondary highways.

Palos Woman's Club To Meet October 3

The Palos Woman's club will have its first fall meeting October 3 in the Village Hall, with a business meeting scheduled for 11 a. m., a luncheon at 12:30 p. m., and a program at 1:30 p. m. This will be the first full meeting at which the new president, Mrs. Charles Tamlyn, will preside.

Mrs. Donald Bond, art chairman, has arranged the afternoon program which will feature a talk by Miss Marie Seton on "Art and Life". As a special art, theater, and film correspondent for Theatre Arts Monthly, Studio Publications, and the Manchester Guardian, Miss Seton covered Europe for seven years prior to coming to America in 1938.

She wrote and produced a film on the history of animation in art, "Drawings that Walk and Talk", for the British Film Institute in 1938, and after going to Hollywood in 1940, she wrote and produced the Mexican Documentary film, "Time in the Sun", shown several times at the Art Institute for its value to art students.

The October 3rd program will be a presentation of the Department of the Fine Arts, of which Mrs. William J. Twigg, is chairman. Special guests will be members of the Third District Board, the Englewood Board, Orland Park, Palos Heights, and Tinley Park Clubs.

Hostesses at the luncheon will be: Mrs. William J. Lauterbach, Mrs. Harold A. Bailey, Mrs. Peter Wagner, Mrs. E. L. Gordy, Mrs. C. B. Barrett, Mrs. George B. Ward, Mrs. Ben Menard and Mrs. W. J. Elliott.

Hostesses for the tea which will follow the program will be: Mrs. Charles Frary, Mrs. Walter Burrows, Mrs. A. S. Bagnall, Mrs. Hans Christensen, Mrs. Fred Mulhausen, Mrs. Glenn Harding, Mrs. John Duhuy, Mrs. H. G. MacDonald, and Mrs. Frank Yunker.

Here Is the Latest News about Chevrolet Deliveries

Everybody from factory to dealer is doing everything that can be done to speed deliveries to you

We have been informed by the Chevrolet Motor Division that the past month has witnessed only a slight improvement in the rate of production of new Chevrolet passenger cars. As a result, shipments of new cars to dealers for delivery are still far below the level we and the factory had hoped to attain by this time. In fact, through August, Chevrolet's output of cars in 1946 was only 22.6% of the number turned out during the corresponding period of 1941.

We know that Chevrolet is doing everything possible to step up its production totals—to ship more and more cars to us and to its thousands of other dealers throughout America... and we know, too, that we are assured of getting our full proportionate share of the current output and of future production gains.

Disappointing as the total figures have been—and despite the fact that Chevrolet was out of production entirely during the first three months of the year—it is nevertheless true that Chevrolet led all other manufacturers in production of passenger cars during June 1946, and has continued to maintain its lead in total production from that day to this.

We shall continue to make deliveries of new Chevrolets to our customers just as fast as we receive them; we regret delays as deeply as you do; we thank you for your friendly patience and understanding; and we promise you a new high motoring experience when you take delivery of your new Chevrolet, giving BIG-CAR QUALITY AT LOWEST COST!

Farm Commentator, heard Monday through Saturday, 6:15-6:45 a. m. on WMAQ, Chicago—670 on your dial

WHEN the harvest is completed this fall, the American farmer can again look back on a year of bountiful and profitable crop production. For this job well done he should have a feeling of justifiable pride, but American agriculture can't stand still and rest on the laurels of past performance.

Another big battle is looming on the farm front, and that is the fight against the age-old threat of farm surpluses. Amid all of the cries for food for the distressed areas of the world, reports are beginning to reach this country on the progress of European harvests. These reports indicate that European agriculture is staging a comeback.

In planning next year's crops, it might be well to take Europe's needs into consideration, for economists believe that after one more year American agriculture will face European competition.

One of the indications towards this type of thinking is illustrated by the Department of Agriculture's action in connection with the 1947 potato price support program, which will be extended only to farmers who plant their potato crop within acreage restrictions. This is a revision of the wartime policy of all possible farm production, and may point out the trend of thought which will be the treatment of price support on other farm products.

It is encouraging to note that farmers themselves are organizing economic conferences in various parts of the country to solve the problem of surpluses—sometimes called overproduction, but which we believe is a lack of distribution and under-consumption.

Surely our American ingenuity and industry, if properly applied, can solve the distribution problem, with new transportation methods developed during the war and the great advances in storage and refrigeration. Here's hoping that folks in town and on the farm can cooperate to beat the surplus problem and keep America the best fed nation in the world.

American Legion Approves Registration

An intensive state-wide drive urging registration of all Illinois voters, with special attention to veterans of World War 2, has been started by the American Legion, Department of Illinois. The campaign is part of the Legion's good citizenship program.

In announcing the campaign State Commander William P. Kleuskens of Beverly Hills, emphasized that as in all Legion activities the drive is completely non-political and that its sole purpose is to impress upon all citizens their obligation to keep our elective form of government representative of the entire electorate.

"We are especially interested in seeing that the men and women who fought the recent war use their ballots," Kleuskens said. "Many of them were under voting age when they went into service and since their return have failed to register. Unless they do register they will not be able to vote in the November elections. Also, those who voted by mail while in service must register now."

"It seems almost incredible," Kleuskens continued, "that these veterans who sacrificed so much and braved the dangers of the battlefield to preserve this nation should in any way be apathetic about taking an active part, as voters at least, in their government. Yet in one downstate county alone it has been reported more than 2500 World War II veterans have failed to register since their return. Part of this is due, no doubt, to misinformation about registration laws, but in some instances it is due to indifference."

Questions of vital importance, Kleuskens said, are to be decided in the fall elections and good citizenship demands that the majority of all qualified voters pass on these measures.

Endorses Driver Training Course

Representing Charles M. Hayes, president, M. C. Sielski, director of the traffic engineering and safety for the Chicago Motor club, conferred in Washington today with American Automobile Association safety leaders from all parts of the country on future programs to reduce street and highway casualties.

Highlighting the meeting was a study of the "home and school cooperation" plan for the promotion of driver-training and education now being made available to schools through the entire Chicago area by the Chicago Motor club. This plan, developed in cooperation with educators, provides a practical course in driver-training consisting of classroom study supplemented by home instruction under the supervision of the school. It has the endorsement of educational authorities in Illinois and Indiana.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Sept. 22, was:

"MATTER"

The Golden Text was:

"Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the God of Jacob"
(Ps. 114: 7).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"No man can serve two masters:
for either he will hate the one,
and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon . . . Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink?
or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed? . . . for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you"
(Matt. 6: 24, 31-33).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from "The Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"We must not attribute more and more intelligence to matter, but less and less, if we would be wise and healthy. The divine Mind, which forms the bud and blossom, will care for the human body, even as it clothes the lily;
but let no mortal interfere with God's government by thrusting in the laws of erring, human concepts . . . Every system of human philosophy, doctrine, and medicine is more or less infected with the pantheistic belief that there is mind in matter; but this belief contradicts alike revelation and right reasoning. A logical and scientific conclusion is reached only through and knowledge that there are not two bases of being,
matter and mind, but one alone,
—Mind" (pp. 62, 279).

G. I. JOE goes back to school

TO HELP speed Illinois Bell's $3,000,000 rural expansion and improvement program, we are conducting special schools for linemen. With new, streamlined training methods, these men—many of them returned veterans—learn the ABC's of the lineman's art in three weeks.

The training schools are only one of many ways by which we hope to set an all-time record in 1946 by installing 9,000 more telephones in the rural areas we serve. Disturbed conditions have slowed our supply of equipment but we're still ahead of schedule.

KEEP EGG VOLUME UP
DURING FALL AND WINTER MONTHS—

LIGHTING

Longer Working Hours
for Layers add up to more fall and winter eggs on Carl Zimmerman's poultry farm near Grant Park, above, and on Richard Hall's place near Bradford, right. Both manager Clyde Graves on the Zimmerman farm and Richard Hall use lights to encourage hens to knuckle down and produce more when premium prices are paid.

IT'S true . . . a little more light can mean a lot more eggs. Proof? The increasing number of alert and progressive poultrymen who are turning to poultry house lighting to keep the eggs coming—when profits are larger!

By lighting up their laying houses in the morning or evening, or both, their layers are given a 12 to 14-hour working day in which to beat the usual fall and winter egg slump . . . are able to keep production at a peak.

If you are not yet using poultry house lighting, start now—before the short dark days begin—to provide your birds with a longer laying day. You'll find the simplest equipment (a few bulbs and an automatic time switch) is all that's needed to get them up earlier and keep them working longer producing extra eggs . . . extra profits for you. Prove to yourself that reaching for the time switch is like reaching for extra eggs.

Electricity for Poultry House Lighting and other poultry house chores is available to more than 91% of the farms in the area served by this company.

Rufe's Ramblings

Way back yonder when I was growing up most of the boys along the line had one ambition in mind, but since it was one of the railroad's requirements we had to do something else till we looked old enough to pass for twenty-one. So the summer I was fourteen I got a job in one of the furniture factories. The Windy Mountain Furniture Mfg. Corp. It was called. One morning the foreman called me and, pointing to a feller in white overalls, he sez to me, "Rufus, this gentleman is from the fire extinguisher concern. You know where they are all located. Go and get them and carry them to the pump at the office and after he recharges them you may put them back where they belong." I knew that there had long been a rule about smoking on the preferences or even carrying loose matches in a feller's pocket, but like everything else it was never taken seriously, so when the boss told me what to do I was only too glad to help impress upon the men, "It can happen here." Not that I had any speech to make on fire prevention—in fact the machinery made so much noise in that department that nobody could have understood me anyhow, and I thought it just as well to go in quietly where they were staining and varnishing, but I carried out the extinguishers. The last time I was in Windy Mountain I met the old foreman and he started laughing. It had taken him thirty-five years to see the joke, but in less time than that I realized the seriousness of my prank. I have often wondered that when I ran in like a wild man and grabbed up each fire extinguisher and tore out the door with it how everybody stamped out of the place without somebody being trampled to death or seriously injured.

Christmas Giving Simplified— You "Plan When You CAN!"

It may be a long time till Christmas but didn't you vow last year that never again would you spend so much for so little nor wait until the eleventh hour to do that spending? And didn't you worry a wrinkle in your pretty brow because you couldn't think of the right gift for the friends who "have everything"? Nobody has everything and the very thing one person may consider too everydayish to rate gift wrapping may be all but priceless in the eyes of another. So, why not for a change do most of your Christmas shopping right in your own fruit pantry? Now is the time to start!

Use Home Canning Jars

If you live in or near the country, a package of native greens—pine, cedar, mistletoe, red berries, bitter sweet, holly, or what have you—along with two or three pint or half-pint jars of your best home canned relish or preserves or chicken will mean far more to the friends who went to the big city to make good than anything you could buy for them. But here is a word of warning. Be sure not to trespass on some other person's property when you go greens hunting (you might land in jail). And be sure that the canned offerings are in regular home canning jars, otherwise you may not get credit for stirring good wishes into that wild blackberry jam, spiced figs, citron preserves, quince jelly, chutney, rummage pickle or whatever is your specialty.

Wrap Jars Safely

We have the word of Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, manufacturer of fruit jars, that home canned products are good travelers when they can go in comfort, but are finicky when it comes to roughing it. In fact, they demand well padded berths. For Christmas packing, Miss Kimbrough suggests that each jar be washed, polished, labeled, and wrapped in thick, shock-absorbing layers of cotton batting, then fitted snugly into a box. The box is gift wrapped and placed in a larger one for shipping. The outside box should be marked "fragile."

Rummage Pickle

- 1 quart chopped ripe tomatoes
- 2 quarts chopped green tomatoes
- 3 large onions
- 1 large cucumber
- 1 quart chopped cabbage

- 3 cups chopped celery
- 3 green peppers
- 3 red peppers
- 1 pod hot red pepper
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon ground cloves
- 2 quarts vinegar

Chop and measure vegetables. Mix with salt. Let stand overnight. Drain. Add other ingredients. Simmer until there is no excess liquid. Pack into hot jars; seal at once.

Peach Chutney

- 1 gallon peaches
- 2 onions
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 cup seeded raisins
- ½ cup white mustard seed
- 2 tablespoons ground ginger
- 1 pod hot red pepper
- 1 cup brown sugar

Chop peeled peaches, onions, garlic and raisins. Add ½ the vinegar. Cook until soft. Add all other ingredients. Cook until thick. Pour into hot jars; seal at once. Apples, pears, or plums may be substituted for peaches in this recipe.

SET YOUR SIGHTS

It takes planning to achieve a goal

Some young men know what they want and plan for it. Others are still looking for their niche. The new Regular Army can help both.

Perhaps you want to go to college but can't afford it. If you enlist in the Army, you'll get your chance. Honorably discharged after a three-year enlistment, you are eligible for 48 months of education at any college, trade, or business school for which you can qualify. The Government will pay your tuition, laboratory fees, etc., up to $500 per ordinary school year, plus $65 a month living allowance—$90 a month if you have dependents.

If you haven't found your spot, an Army enlistment offers you training in any of 200 trades and skills. You leave the service eligible for further training at the best civilian schools.

You can assure yourself of the benefits of the GI Bill of Rights if you enter the Army on or before October 5, 1946. See your nearest Army Recruiting Station for details.

HIGHLIGHTS OF REGULAR ARMY ENLISTMENT

- Enlistments for 1½, 2 or 3 years. (1-year enlistments permitted for men now in the Army with 6 or more months of service.)
- Enlistment age from 18 to 34 years inclusive (17 with parents' consent) except for men now in Army, who may reenlist at any age, and former service men depending on length of service.
- A reenlistment bonus of $50 for each year of active service since such bonus was last paid, or since last entry into service, provided reenlistment is within 3 months after last honorable discharge.
- A furlough for men who reenlist within 20 days. Full details of other furlough privileges can be obtained from Recruiting Officers.
- Mustering-out pay (based upon length of service) to all men who are discharged to enlist or reenlist.
- Option to retire at half pay for the rest of your life after 20 years' service—increasing to three-quarters pay after 30 years' service. All previous active federal military service counts toward retirement.
- Choice of branch of service and overseas theater (of those still open) on 3-year enlistments.

Going Fishing?
Here's How!

To hear Willie Wells and Basil Strube arguing about trout fishing, you'd think it was more important than the atom bomb.

Willie favors dry flies, Basil pooh-poohs anything but wet flies. Willie swears by a Royal Coachman; Basil won't hear of anything but a Silver Doctor. And by the time it comes to steel rods versus bamboo rods ... #IX&!!

But on Saturday, each got back from Seward's creek with a catch that couldn't have differed by more than several ounces!

Each had used his favorite kind of fly, his favorite rod and his favorite place to cast. So over a friendly glass of beer, they allowed as how maybe they were both right ... which is how so many arguments should end.

From where I sit, if we all respected one another's different opinions—whether about trout flies, or drinking beer, or voting, life would be a whole lot pleasanter.

Picturesque Wilderness Becomes National Park

City-weary Americans will have an opportunity to step into the past to see the northern forest as it was centuries before Columbus stumbled onto a new world through dedication of forest-green and rugged Isle Royale, "the jewel of Lake Superior," as the nation's newest national park.

The island, jutting boldly from the blue Superior waters, 55 miles from the mainland, stood for centuries before its discovery by the Indians.

French explorers followed the Red Men across the lake to the island, a virtually untouched laboratory of nature where rich mineral deposits lie buried deep beneath the grandeur of the surface.

Mecca for Thousands.

Centuries later the modern sportsman and tourist rediscovered Isle Royale, and now it has become a mecca for several thousand persons each year.

Dubbed the "Lake Superior icebox," Isle Royale is isolated by the ice over Lake Superior for seven months a year—November to May. It is the permanent winter home of only fishermen and trappers. In the summer months the population is increased greatly when more fishermen arrive and when vacationists flock to the picturesque wilderness.

Years ago the state of Michigan took initial steps to save the island from the pulp loggers, already starting their operations there, for a cut-over Isle Royale would have been such a bleak and barren wilderness that probably not even the moose would have liked the place.

Came in 'Big Freeze.'

The famous Isle Royale moose, incidentally, are not native to the island. They have been there only since the very cold winter of 1912 when that part of the big lake froze so solidly that the herds' ancestors migrated from Canada 10 miles across the ice. The island proved a perfect place for the moose, the herd thriving and increasing.

The caribou and white-tailed deer, which were native to the island long before the moose came, are no longer found there. But of other wild life there is a good variety and an abundant amount: mink, beaver, coyote, brush wolves, rabbits.

The island is the home of a great many water birds that fish on its shores and streams. Like every well watered wilderness, Isle Royale is a forested area with groves of white and black birch, sugar, red and mountain maples. Black ash, mountain ash, quaking aspen, alders and willow trees also thrive.

Because the winters are sub-arctic and the nutriment for trees is meager and the summers short, some trees are more than four centuries old and only five feet tall.

The area abounds in wild flowers, including 30 varieties of orchids.

Starts Campaign.

The man who made the modern discovery of Isle Royale was Dr. William P. Scott, who in 1890 was sent there to look after the miners and their families. He made leisurely explorations over the place, fell in love with the rugged island far out in the cold, cold lake and was the first to campaign for its nationalization.

Fishermen, meantime, built huts, groups of them clustered into tiny shoreline villages, and worked the rich waters around the island, taking out whitefish by the ton. Life in the summertime there was pleasant and profitable.

But life on Isle Royale in the winter was always rugged, bleak, lonesome and dangerous. Once a winter worker had an eye pecked out by an owl made so desperate by hunger that it dared attack a man.

Formerly there was no communication between the island and the rest of the world from the time the last boat sailed away in November until the next one broke through the ice in May. In late years, of course, there has been radio.

Compared to Battlewagon.

The big island is 46 miles long, contains 205 square miles of area and has a number of small islets around it so that it is sometimes compared to a battleship escorted by a flotilla of destroyers. Transportation around the island is by boat from port to port, or by foot over the moose or old miner trails, some of which were cleared a bit and marked a few years ago by the CCC. There are no railroads, not even any wagon roads on Isle Royale.

In 1931 congress voted to make a national park out of the area, and in 1933 President Roosevelt approved the spending of $750,000 of federal funds to purchase land of the island in danger of being logged for pulp. By 1939 all claims were cleared and the department of interior took over administration of the area, making it a national park. The war intervened to delay dedication of the new park until this fall.

Doctors Abandoned Hope—But Injured Vet Now Can Talk

JAMESTOWN, N. Y. — "He'll never talk again," doctors agreed after Richard J. Werner, 20, of Jamestown, was wounded in action on a battlefield in Germany March 25, 1945 — but now Werner plans to try out for his school glee club.

Seriously injured by a blast from a German howitzer, Werner had a hole in his throat, severed vocal cords, fractured larynx and severed windpipe. After lying in an army hospital for more than a month, breathing through a silver tube inserted through the wound in his throat, Werner heard a doctor say:

"We're going to try to suture your vocal cords, fella. Not much chance it will work, but we may get a squawk or two out of you."

Three months in a hospital in England and another at Fort Devens, Mass., passed before a doctor removed the tube and asked: "How you feeling, boy?"

"Okay," Werner rasped without thinking—and then, in a fever of excitement, he croaked: "Hey! I can talk!"

Heavy Eating Bees Must Be Well Fed

Annual Requirements Six Times Bees' Weight

By W. J. DRYDEN

Some colonies of bees gather a type of honey in the fall that they cannot digest during the winter. All bees need about six times their own body weight a year in feed, which means that a 10-pound colony requires 60 pounds of honey and four or five combs of pollen stored in the hive to carry them through the winter.

When bees are lacing in honey they can be fed sugar syrup immediately after the fall honey flow ceases, to provide them with food for the winter.

Sugar syrup being given to hive of bees at USDA testing laboratory.

When bees are confined their rations must be watched. If they run out of pollen, it may be furnished by feeding soybean flour. The flour should be fed on top of the frames where they can get it during bad weather when they need it most.

When new bees are housed, a can of sugar syrup may be placed in each hive, as shown in the illustration. This same method may be followed when bees run short on honey for any reason.

Flea Beetle Control Must Be Started Now

Flea beetles often feed and breed on various types of weeds, closely related to garden crops. They spend the winter in the adult stage hidden away under leaves, grass or other protection in the garden along fences or in adjoining waste areas, later moving to garden.

Control means that weeds never be allowed to grow or trash to accumulate that will serve as a winter housing project. The use of calcium arsenate or arsenate of lead-lime dust, rotenone or pyrethrum dusts have proven effective as sprays or dust.

Light Shipping Coop

When it becomes necessary to ship breeding stock or show poultry, this light-weight shipping crate will be found satisfactory. It may be marked for return, in which case, if kept clean and disinfected, it may be used over and over again.

Use of Dry Ice Proves

Death to Pesty Rats

Not only will dry ice rid storage houses of rats, mice and other pests but will aid in reducing scald, experiments at Rhode Island station show. In the tests 25 pounds of dry ice for each 100 cubic feet of storage space was used in tightly closed buildings. The ice, fanned by electric fans, will produce a 20 per cent carbon dioxide concentration, sufficient to kill all rats and mice present.

2,4-D Known to Kill

Many Weeds Outright

Among the weeds that 2,4-D will kill are buckhorn, burdock, chicory, cocklebur, dandelion, dog fennel, elderberry, fanweed, ground ivy, lambsquarters, legumes, locust, morning glory, nettles, pepper grass, pigweed, plantain, ragweed, sow thistle, sumac, sunflower, wild top, wild buckwheat, wild carrot, wild radish, yellow rocket, yellow trefoil and Austrian cress. Others are added daily.

JESUS AND THE LAW OF LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 119:33-38; Matthew 5:43-48.

MEMORY SELECTION—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.—Romans 13:10.

Love fulfilled the law—in Christ. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son (John 3:16). The law of love is therefore appropriate as the subject of our closing lesson on the general theme, "Jesus Interprets Old Testament Laws."

Love is the heavenly gift of God, who is love, to man who so much needs its grace and power for his own life and for his living with others.

I. The Mind of Love (Ps. 119:33-35).

Eight times in this psalm there is found the cry of verse 33 for instruction in the laws of God. Man not only must know them, but he must know how they operate. The picture here is that of a man who wants to get in step with God, marching out to spiritual warfare and being prepared to respond in prompt obedience to the commands of his divine leader.

Here we have the true mind of love. The one rightly instructed in the principles of God's rule in the world sees that love is the basic requirement, but that it expresses itself in a life that is in accord with the will of God.

The thought of this passage is well expressed by Dr. W. R. White: "The psalmist had the highest possible conception of love before the revelation in Christ. He saw it as the basic order of things. He conceived it as identical with the will of God. He viewed it as the safe, happy path for man. He considered it as the way of wisdom. He passionately desired to embrace it and order his life by it. He saw it imparting to the naive and simple the benefits of extraordinary judgment. To measure up he knew that he had to be quickened or made alive to it by the power of God."

II. The Manner of Love (Ps. 119:36-38).

Love operates not from necessity, but because of an inner urge which will not be denied. The psalmist prays that his heart may be so inclined toward the Lord and so quickened within that he may be eager to do the will of God.

Love has a technique, if you will, a manner of operation. It avoids certain things which will hinder or prevent its full function and seeks out those attitudes and experiences which will encourage and enlarge.

Covetousness must be avoided, for that is idolatry (Col. 3:5). We noted in our lesson of two weeks ago that covetousness makes a man stingy, envious, selfish, proud and foolish. That means that love must rule out this destructive element. Love cannot live in such an atmosphere.

Love turns away from vanity. The vain things of this world are usually presented in such attractive dress that to look at them is to be tempted. The answer is to turn your eyes away, or better still, ask God to give you special grace not only to turn away, but to stay turned away. The vain passions of this world destroy real love, even while using the word to describe their base counterfeit.

The positive side of the matter is also clear. The manner in which love best expresses itself is in the fear of God, in the established order of a life according to the law of God (v. 38). By being inclined to his testimonies it finds the right way—God's way (v. 37).

III. The Measure of Love (Matt. 5:43-48).

How far does love go? Does it have a limit? Does it choose those toward whom it will express itself, loving the lovely and ignoring or hating the rest? In answer to these questions let us first ask, What is the general attitude of the world? The answer is evident. The world has established its own principle of conduct based on selfish advantage. It pays to be polite to those who can favor you, so cultivate their good will by acts of courtesy and kindness. Your neighbor may be able to help you in an hour of need, so do good to him as you have opportunity.

But an enemy—what can you gain from kindness to him? Hate him, and treat him like an enemy.

Christianity knows nothing of such a spirit. Even though it be necessary to oppose wicked men in order to hinder their evil plans, we need not lose our love for them. Even those who despoil us use us may be loved for Christ's sake.

"Consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself (and went right on loving them) lest ye be wearied" in your own love for those who bear the sad name of enemies (see Heb. 12:3).

This is admittedly a high standard, but it is not too high for those who know the love of Christ.

Even Beavers Occasionally Are too Eager

GREELEY, COLO.—Even beavers occasionally become too eager, county road workmen insist.

Called to repair a flooded section of county road, the workers at first thought some farmer had been careless with irrigation water. Later they discovered that beavers were building a dam across a nearby irrigation ditch, causing water to run onto the road. The road workers pulled out the dam. That night the beavers put it back in. The battle continued, the roadmen working like beavers taking out the dam during the daytime and the beavers living up to their name at night by putting the dam back.

Finally Sheriff Gus Anderson was called into the case. He refused to take legal action to dispossess the beavers, but he did notify Game Warden W. O. Adkins, who will trap the beavers.

Report Of Library Trustee Candidates At Club Meeting

The New Lenox Woman's club opened the club year with a meeting in the Jones home Tuesday afternoon, September 17. Mrs. George Morris opened the meeting with group singing with Mrs. Aurelia Bruns at the piano.

The day set for the regular monthly meeting was the 3rd Tuesday of each month. Mrs. Clementine Hendrixson resigned as secretary and Mrs. Lucille Drake was elected to the office.

The report of the Library board was given by Mrs. Madelyn Miller. Thanks to the generosity of the different organizations in the community in response to the library request for funds nearly all the financial obligations have been met. The request that the library be put on a tax basis will be voted on on October 8, the day for registration of new voters.

The six library trustees whose names will appear on the ballot and who have agreed to serve if elected are: Mrs. Ruby Gougar, Mrs. Laura Morris, Mrs. Marie Hauck, Mrs. Fred Krog, Mrs. Fred Scheel and Mr. Frank Pester.

The new year books were distributed and in place of a program the club drove to Pilcher Park to enjoy the beauty of the flower beds. An exhibit of school pictures was shown and refreshments were served. Plans for the next meeting are not definite but will be announced later.

Brands Old

The brand idea is as old as any known institution of civilization. It marked the beginning of a philosophy in business by which the producer openly assumed a responsibility for his product to the purchaser. Earliest excavations have revealed paving bricks marked with the brand name of the manufacturer, and during the period of the guilds in Europe, the use of brands was highly developed. Infringements were harshly dealt with. A textile manufacturer who omitted his trade-mark was often punished by having his right hand removed.

Try This Dressing On Garden Salads

With ever-welcome "garden sass" at hand to enliven meals, the home-maker's job is to sell the family, especially younger members on fresh garden salads, Mrs. R. G. Kyger writes in nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

Various combinations of vegetables can and should be used. Since dressing is the lifeblood of the salad, Mrs. Kyger suggests the following:

TOMATO SOUP FRENCH DRESSING

1 can condensed tomato soup 1/2 tsp salt
Sprig of fresh tarragon 1 clove garlic
Lemon juice

Press cut clove of garlic into the salt to flavor it. Mix the salt with tomato soup. Add one sprig of fresh tarragon, if available, and any other preferred seasonings. Thin mixture to desired consistency for dressing with lemon juice—about 1/2 cup.

Insecticide "Bomb"

Hand-size dispensers for insecticidal aerosols are now available, writes the Rural Home editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer. The fine mist they produce will give protection against flies, mosquitoes and moths in the flying stage. When valve on "bomb" is opened, the enclosed liquid changes to gas; this expands into the room.

Uncle Sam Says

None of us will ever celebrate D-Day in the spirit of a gay holiday. On the contrary, June 6 is forever enshrined as a day of sacrifice. Two years ago, on the beaches of Normandy, all our hopes for a peaceful, happy future were in the balance of bloody invasion. The best observance you can make of the first peacetime anniversary of D-Day is to make sure you are buying as many savings bonds as ever. You backed the attack—now back your own future.

Will County People Promoting Health Dept

Next Wednesday evening at 8:15 on the regular weekly broadcast of the Will County Health Department program over WJOL, Mr. Louis Bottino, County Superintendent of Schools and Dr. Gayle Hufford, Joliet City Superintendent of Schools, with Rev. Paul Saunders, will tell of the Health Services which have been provided for the school children of Will County through the cooperation of the Health Department and the Schools. Uniform health services have been made available for all children in the schools of Will County.

Many youngsters may appear reasonably healthy and still harbor a hidden and correctible condition that in later years may be a stumbling block. Many of these remedial defects have been discovered, thus making it possible for parents to have conditions made before they became serious. These parents have given their children their fellow pupils.

Without this cooperation between health and education personnel, many boys and girls would be handicapped by being placed in a position to meet their school problems, lacking in physical fitness and unprotected against preventable diseases.
